

For much attention from sports writers or athletes these days. Yet, everyone who makes a living from basketball ought to be eternally grateful to the lowly fruit receptacle.

And that includes everybody from Johnny Wooden, Frank Long and Bill Wall to the guy who sells peanuts at Madison Square Garden during the annual National Invitational Tournament. Not to mention the likes of Bill Bradley, Jerry Lucas, Bill Russell and Wilt Chamberlain, to mention a few players, the game has elevated into the caviar class.

You wouldn't think a peach basket would have much to do with college education. But every seven-footer who's slick enough with a basketball to catch the eye of a scout owes his four-year full scholarship to that humble hamper. In fact, the very name of the game is derived from it. For without peach baskets and an imaginative young YMCA gym instructor there very likely wouldn't be any game of basketball, a chilling thought for its multitude of beneficiaries.

Though college football was well established around the end of last century, the season was short. By Thanksgiving Day it was pretty much over, with no major indoor sport to take up the slack during the long winter months. Football-playing students at a college to train Christian workers in Springfield, Mass., found themselves bored with Indian clubs, tumbling and calisthenics in the winter of 1891. They craved action, a game, a sport offering challenge and competition and one which could be played indoors.

The challenge was taken up by young James Naismith, a McGill University graduate who, as physical education instructor, believed in teaching rather than preaching, especially by using students' love of sports as a vehicle for his pedagogy. What Naismith brought into the gym late in December, 1891, were the structure and regulations of basketball, which have survived virtually intact to this day, all written out and ready for the tip-off.

He lacked only the hoops through which the ball was to be dropped. When the janitor hauled up from the basement two peach baskets, he not only solved the hoop problem but gave the game its name. Naismith nailed the baskets to the walls at either end of the 35x50 ft gym ten feet above the floor (still regulation height) formed teams and whistled the new game into full birth.

The college for training Christian workers was, of course, the YMCA's Springfield College. Today, still a major YMCA college, Springfield houses, fittingly enough, the Naismith Memorial Basketball Hall of Fame. Young Jim went on to become Dr. James A. Naismith and his peach-basket game blossomed into one of the world's most popular, widely-played games. It's international status was confirmed by inclusion into the Olympics as a regular gold medal event.

Of course, basketball is no longer either an exclusively indoor or winter-bound sport, but is played year-round outdoors as well as inside. It's also one of the largest drawing spectator sports, with attendance running into the millions, plus millions more who watch the game on television. In terms of number of participants, it is now America's number one sport.

We're reminded this week, which happens to be National YMCA Week, that as it was in the beginning, so it still is with basketball and YMCAs. "In its early years, the game was largely confined to YMCAs," says Donald F. Hardesty of the Jacksonville YMCA, "largely because only Ys had both gyms and coaches. Within one year was being played in YMCAs from Maine to Oregon. It wasn't until 1894 that the first intercollegiate game was played, but the game itself had been carried to colleges and schools by boys who learned it at YMCAs.

Two years after the day the first peach baskets were tacked up, basketball was being played in a dozen foreign countries where it had been introduced by YMCA secretaries on overseas duty.

Today, basketball is still a major YMCA sport. Many players, including some of the biggest names in the game, dribbled their first basketballs across a Y gym floor. With new Ys being opened regularly, this is likely to continue.

Though Naismith was the inventor of basketball, the man who undoubtedly did more than anyone else to popularize the game nationally was Adolph Rupp, University of Kentucky coach from 1930 to 1972. And Rupp learned the game from Naismith. Last November, Rupp was honored by the YMCA for his achievements as a basketball coach and for his contributions to the game and its popularity. Rupp said at the time, "I sat at the feet of Dr. Naismith for five years almost five days a week, three to four hours a day, talking about basketball."

Well, whoever thought up the adage "Great oaks from little acorns grow," missed a bet when he failed to consider the peach basket as a potential progenitor. Nor did Naismith's dream of the ramifications of that little game he conceived in a YMCA gym. But there it is.

Bo Schembechler Named Big Ten Coach Of Year

CHICAGO (AP) — Bo Schembechler, who directed co-champion Michigan to 10 successive victories before a closing upset by Ohio State, Tuesday was named winner of the first Big Ten Football Coach of the Year Award.

Schembechler, whose Wolverines finished with a 10-1 record—marred only by a tough 14-11 loss to the Buckeyes—was selected for the new honor in a poll of news media covering the Big Ten.

The trophy was presented to Schembechler by commissioner Wayne Duke at a press reception Tuesday night also attended by the nine other conference coaches.

Duke lauded Schembechler's 38-4 record during his four-season regime at Michigan commending it as "one of the all-time best ever over that time span."

Instead of rebuilding in 1972, after losing 15 starters, Schembechler fashioned the Wolverines into a club which finished No. 7 in the final Associated Press poll. It marked the third time in Bo's four seasons, Michigan won outright or shared the Big Ten title.

The honoring of Schembechler climaxed a day-long annual meeting of conference coaches at which the mentors discussed problems of last fall and new rules for the 1973 season.

The group represented considerable reshuffling since the close of the 1972 campaign in which Ohio State and Michigan tied for the title at 7-1 and Purdue placed third with 6-2.

Over the winter, Alex Agase shifted from Northwestern to succeed retired Bob DeMoss at Purdue; Indiana's Johnny Pont replaced Agase at Northwestern; Lee Corso went to Indiana from Louisville and Denny Stolz became head coach at Michigan State, supplanting his retired former boss, Duffy Daugherty.

Litwack Tells Of Retirement From Temple

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Harry Litwack, one of the coaching greats of college basketball, announced Tuesday he's calling it a career at Temple University at the end of this season.

The 65-year-old Litwack, who coached Temple to 13 post-season tournaments in the last 17 years, will be succeeded by his 35-year-old assistant, Don Casey. Under Litwack, Temple won 356 and lost 183 over a 20-year period. His team is 8-7 so far this season.

Litwack said his decision to retire was not an easy one. "I could have continued for another year, but I've had some problems with my health the past couple of years and decided to retire from basketball in June, rather than continue to gamble with my health."

Larry Brown

Players Pick Brown For MVP Award

By MURRAY OLDERMAN WASHINGTON D.C. — (NEA)

Larry Brown, the irrepressible running back of the Washington Redskins, was today named the winner of the 18 annual Jim Thorpe Memorial Trophy as the most valuable player in the National Football League.

The recipient of the award, instituted by Newspaper Enterprise Association in 1955 is determined by a vote of his peers, the players on the 26 teams in the National Football League. Brown was the runaway winner this season, just as he had run away from tacklers to lead the National Football Conference in rushing.

In a season which produced nine men who gained more than 1,000 yards on the ground—a decade ago only five different men in professional football history had attained that figure—the compact Redskin's runner was the nonpareil.

He is the first ball carrier to win the coveted trophy since the great Jim Brown of the Cleveland Browns in 1965.

"I'm really honored," said the latter-day Brown, with feeling, when told of his selection. "It's a surprise and I don't even know what to say. That's the same award that went to Jim Brown and John Unitas—all these individuals I've admired."

Brown has completed his fourth pro season with the Redskins. He was an obscure eighth round draft choice from Kansas State when he reported to Vince Lombardi's first Washington team in 1969 with marginal size 5-11 and 195 pounds for a running back in the NFL.

Lombardi liked his moves as a runner and his guts but couldn't figure a reaction lag until he checked Larry's hearing. A special device fitted in his helmet saved his career.

Football has brought the good life to Brown, but he doesn't forget the poverty of his childhood, spent in a rough Pittsburgh area. A college sociology major, he works with deprived children. On Christmas Day, with reserve quarterback Sam Wyche and Harold Bell, who runs a local "Saturday" program at the Hillcrest Recreation Center for ghetto kids, he threw a party for 100 youngsters.

This has been the Year of the Running Back in professional football, and Larry has been the pacesetter. He reached a career high of 1,216 yards rushing, although he was held out of the last two games of the regular schedule so he would be in shape for the playoffs.

"Many have said," surmises Larry, "it's due to the moving of the hash marks closer to the center of the field, or that we run more because of the double zone teams are using on pass defense. I think it's due mostly to the fact there aren't actually too many great quarterbacks in football right now. There are a lot of younger ones playing in the league and it takes awhile to learn to read defenses, so most teams are going with the run because it's safer."

When you have Larry Brown in the backfield, it's also a cinch way to pick up yardage. He has averaged 4.3 yards every time he has taken a handoff in pro ball.

Because he takes a tremendous battering (he carries the ball an average of 24 times a game) Brown has built his weight up to 205 pounds. He also runs smarter.

"As a rookie," he says, "you run scared. You try not to take a loss. You outrun the blocking and you make minor mistakes sometimes a big one. With experience you recognize defenses and become a more complete ballplayer, running pass routes and blocking."

The last two Redskin seasons under George Allen, the most successful in Washington since 1945, produced a change in Larry's football thinking. "We've absorbed," he says, "the George Allen philosophy of everybody pulling together. We got away from individual goals."

Report Russians Pleased With AP Korbut Award

NEW YORK (AP) — Russian people "felt special pride when our Olga Korbut was voted Female Athlete of the Year in balloting by American newsmen," a Soviet sports official said Tuesday.

Ildar Kalilulin of the Russian sports ministry said the results of The Associated Press poll, "were widely publicized in my country and very gratifying." Kalilulin is traveling in the United States with the Soviet national boxing team, which meets a squad of American amateurs Saturday at Las Vegas, Nev.

The 84-pound Miss Korbut won three gold medals and a silver at the Munich Olympics and won many American hearts since her flawless gymnastic performances were televised in the United States.

The University of Illinois ranks second in the total number of NCAA Track and Field Championships (outdoor) with five.

The Illini were NCAA champions at the first event in 1921 and added titles in 1927, 1944, 1946, 1947.

Three Atlantic Coast Conference powerhouses are waiting like vultures for somebody to knock off the heretofore unknockable UCLA Bruins.

It would become an ACC world.

The Bruins, at the doorstep of college basketball's longest winning streak, remain a strong No. 1 in The Associated Press poll. But, UCLA can't look back.

National scoring leader North Carolina State is No. 2 with a 12-0 record, the University of North Carolina is No. 3 at 15-1 and Maryland is fourth with a 12-1 mark.

UCLA has 59 straight victories and can tie the all-time record of 60 in a Thursday night game in Chicago against Loyola. If that goes okay, the Bruins shoot for No. 61 Saturday against Notre Dame at South Bend, Ind.

If the Bruins stumble, the ACC threesome will be waiting to charge for the top AP ranking that has been almost exclusively UCLA's for a decade.

However, the ACC strongboys will also begin knocking one another off when the league gets into heavy home-and-home play. North Carolina State captured the only major matchup to date with a triumph over Maryland.

North Carolina plays at Maryland Saturday night. The Terps then play on the road at N.C. State next week. The first of two North Carolina-N.C. State battles comes Feb. 5 on the Wolfpack's floor.

Long Beach State, 15-1, is ranked fifth in this week's balloting by a nationwide panel of sports writers and broadcasters, followed in the Top Ten by Indiana, 11-2; Missouri, 13-2; Minnesota, 11-2; Alabama, 10-1; and Marquette, 12-2.

Houston, 12-2, heads the second 10 ranked teams, followed by Southwestern Louisiana, 12-1; Jacksonville, 13-2; Providence, 10-2; St. John's, N.Y., 11-2; San Francisco, 12-2; Memphis State, 19; New Mexico, 20; Purdue, 10-3.

The Top 20, with first place votes in parentheses and total points tabulated on basis of 20-18-16-14-12-10-9-8-etc., are:

1. UCLA (41)
2. N. Carolina St. (1)

Lockport Central first place votes for a total of 256 points. Lockport Central presently has a 15-0 record and meets Joliet Central, rated No. 14 in this week's poll, Saturday night.

Lincoln again was rated No. 2. The railers also have a 15-0 season record. Quincy held its No. 3 spot in the polls, but Elgin dropped from No. 4 to No. 6 in this week's poll. West Aurora moved from No. 6 to No. 4 and Collinsville, which beat Proviso East 80-71 during the weekend, retained the No. 5 spot.

Chicago Hirsch remained No. 7 and Proviso East, despite the loss to Collinsville, remained No. 8.

Dolton Thornridge dropped from the ratings altogether after getting beat by Chicago Heights Bloom 66-57 last weekend.

The ratings, with won-lost records in parentheses, and total points:

1. Lockport Central (15-0) 256
2. Lincoln (15-0) 203
3. Quincy (14-1) 200
4. West Aurora (17-1) 198
5. Collinsville (14-0) 197
6. Elgin (14-1) 194
7. Chicago Hirsch (13-1) 193
8. Proviso East (10-3) 122

A win would tie the 60 straight hung up by San Francisco, featuring Bill Russell and Casey Jones, from Dec. 7, 1955, until Dec. 17, 1957, when Illinois triumphed.

The captain of that Illinois team was Harv Schmidt, now the Illini coach, whose team will play in the doubleheader opener against Notre Dame, strangely the last team to beat UCLA.

Weapons to Win
Ireland figured that his starters, even including a freshman, John Willey, had the weapons to win. Forward Nate Hayes, he said, is "one of the best. Frank Sanders at guard, "we should have no trouble with the press."

Center Paul Cohen, though giving away height to either Bill Walton or Swen Nater of UCLA at center, "is capable of doing the job against them," Ireland said.

"Our kids should be proud to play them," he added. "We'll have no trouble brining them up for the game. We never do."

"We'll press them and try to keep them outside. Then we'll be very selective in our shooting, and hope we shoot well."

No Slowdown Game
"I wouldn't play a slowdown game, though. The fans don't want to see that and it wouldn't be fair to them. There could be 18,000 people there and they want to see a basketball game."

Ireland was as concerned about how UCLA Coach Johnny Wooden feels about playing Loyola as he was about his own feelings.

"We've beaten him a couple of times," he said. "Once we beat him in overtime, and another time when he had (Walt) Hazzard and (Gail) Goodrich, about 112 to 92 or something like that. Every year we play the No. 1 team, so we're not unaccustomed to this."

With Ireland's confidence, maybe his kids will pick it up too, and anything could happen.

NEA Sports Editor

NEW YORK — (NEA) — This incredible story begins: "In December 1944, I was hanged at Auschwitz."

Yet Sam Kessel lived to write about it in "Hanged at Auschwitz" (Stein and Day), winner of the Grand Prix Littéraire de la Resistance, and recently translated from French into English.

Kessel, once a promising French boxer, had been arrested by Nazis for his two-year involvement in the French resistance and for being Jewish.

When he and four fellow co-workers were caught trying to escape from the Auschwitz concentration camp, they were brought back to camp and hanged.

Kessel's rope broke. But no reprieve. He was brought to "the notorious Jacob, chief kapo (prisoner-collaborator) and the camp's official killer." Jacob was to put a bullet through Kessel's head.

Jacob, according to Kessel, had been a sparring partner for Max Schmeling, the one-time world heavyweight champion. This knowledge was Kessel's only chance for survival, he felt.

"I argued that one boxer could not kill another boxer," writes Kessel. "He looked at me in surprise."

"Did you box?" asked Jacob.

"The words poured out of me, I named names, described bouts. And though he obviously hadn't heard of me and my ring career, our common passion for boxing was a bond. I felt that he was becoming interested, that he was beginning to struggle with himself. I thought that I detected a flash of something was it sympathy?" — in his cold gray eyes.

Jacob saved him. It was the second time that Kessel's boxing background moved an enemy to spare his life.

About a year before that, Kessel was marching in a column to the gas chamber to be exterminated. He noticed that one of the S.S. troopers at the crematorium had the marks of a boxer: "broken nose, ridges over the eyes, cauliflower ears."

Noted and shivering, Kessel walked over to him, and said, "Boxer?"

"Boxer? Ja!"

"He didn't wait for me to exclaim," writes Kessel, "he untied me. Too had a broken nose."

The S.S. man put the nude condemned man on the back seat of his motorcycle, and drove him to safety, for the time being.

Kessel says that neither the kapo nor the S.S. trooper were compassionate men. They were killers but their life-giving acts stemmed from the "casual good sportsmanship of the boxer to another, the act of a man who still felt some kinship with the past."

Kessel's story tells in stark and simple language how he endured 23 months of the most brutal dropped from 155 pounds to 78 pounds, had a finger resected, horrors and tortures moved during a torture session.

When Kessel was first arrested, the S.S. troopers tortured and beat him to find out who his Resistance collaborators were. His now-purple face, he says, was a mass of raw wounds, eyes were swollen, his body cut up, his fingers raw from having match-sticks jabbed under the nails, his testicles were beaten blue.

"Perhaps it was my training that gave me the ability to take torture without breaking down," he writes. "A boxer learns to live with pain. And, most important, he can only consider himself a real boxer if he stubbornly perseveres to the end, refusing against all odds to admit defeat."

Something else, another remnant from his athletic days, kept Kessel going: his inherent optimism. "This particular feeling helped to keep me alive, and to a large extent spared me the dejection that burdened most of the prisoners and hastened their end."

Kessel is now 53 years old and, according to friends, has regained his vigorous health. He returned to Paris after the war but never returned to the ring. He says he wrote "Hanged at Auschwitz" to keep the memory of "the concentration-camp martyrs" fresh. The Nazis took the boxg out of Kessel, but not the fight.
